

Rules of doing--

Rule #1: Pray

You want God to be your teacher, so set your heart and mind toward Him. Trying to be your own teacher is way too limiting.

Rule #2: Mark

Marking your Bible means writing notes from sermons, writing your insights (be sure to date them), writing out lists, highlighting verses you want to memorize, color-coding certain themes or words, etc.

Rules of thinking--

Rule #3: Context

Examples of context:

Material before and after--why this verse is where it is at all
What kind of book it's in--prophecy, poetry, history, letter, etc.
Historical, geographical, and cultural--Put yourself in the shoes of the original writer and readers

Rule #4: Big picture (really big picture!)

The main character=God.

The big story=God's love for people; He reconciles the relationship through Jesus.

Connections--One book written through one Spirit telling one big story about one main character, so look for connections.

Rule #5: Purpose

You're studying your Bible, and that's great, but what's the point? Simple--The purpose is to make you more like Jesus. That's it. And what a privilege.

Rules of doing--

Rule #1: Pray

You want God to be your teacher, so set your heart and mind toward Him. Trying to be your own teacher is way too limiting.

Rule #2: Mark

Marking your Bible means writing notes from sermons, writing your insights (be sure to date them), writing out lists, highlighting verses you want to memorize, color-coding certain themes or words, etc.

Rules of thinking--

Rule #3: Context

Examples of context:

Material before and after--why this verse is where it is at all
What kind of book it's in--prophecy, poetry, history, letter, etc.
Historical, geographical, and cultural--Put yourself in the shoes of the original writer and readers

Rule #4: Big picture (really big picture!)

The main character=God.

The big story=God's love for people; He reconciles the relationship through Jesus.

Connections--One book written through one Spirit telling one big story about one main character, so look for connections.

Rule #5: Purpose

You're studying your Bible, and that's great, but what's the point? Simple--The purpose is to make you more like Jesus. That's it. And what a privilege.